IN CUSTODY

Stabbed in the chest by a playmate during a quarrel after Sunday school, 13-year-old Robert Cololuck, of Marie Avenue, Everett, is near death today.

In custody as a delinquent was Frederick, 12-year-old, Dominick Presi, of Ferry street, Everett, whose jackknife caused the wound.

They are reported to have quarreled over the knife on Sunday afternoon in front of Little Luther Church, Broadway, Cololuck, claiming a remark made by Presi, caused the quarrel.

Police said they were not sure that the knife was the cause of the quarrel, but that the quarrel was the cause of the knife.

What is the real explanation of the change, the universal appeal of Shirley Temple, wonder child of the screen? Genius, perhaps, in a measure, but genius, alone, would not have made her the success she is.

Hollywood agrees that much of the success of the individual little actress is due to her mother. And Hollywood is probably 99 per cent right.

Peggy Doyle, staff writer of the Boston Evening American, says much of Shirley Temple's success is due to her mother, Mrs. Temple, the actress of various roles.

Shirley Temple, whose naturalness on screen is due, according to Peggy Doyle, to the fact that she is permitted to handle her roles just as she interprets them—and has a lot of fun doing it.

Although she's only half-past seven and receives an annual income of $500,000 Shirley Temple of the 62 golden curls (count 'em) leads a normal little girl's life outside of the few hours she spends before a camera approximately 22 weeks a year.

Just as "working hours" are set for much play for Shirley Temple, so her daily routine is set for her. Her mother, Mrs. Temple, who is a public school teacher and has no remarkable responsibilities, is the one who sets the routine.

That may sound as if it were trying to make a child prodigy of Shirley, which is certainly not so. The fact is that Shirley enjoys the pictures she is making so much and enters in the spirit of them that she forgets the fact that she is a child.

They have all demonstrated unusual understanding and sensitivity in their handling of Shirley and have made her hours of the studio a splendid, helpful, pleasant experience for her.

When I was first approached with the suggestion to put Shirley in the movies, I refused to consider it. I thought, as many who will read this series, think, that a Hollywood studio is the last place in the world I'd ever want to see my child.

G-Man Reveals:

Hot-Lead Finish For Barkers

By MELVIN PURVIS
CHAPTER XXIII

When on a raid of a serious character (and every one should be so considered because there is always the chance that a so-called lesser light of the underworld may develop into a killer the moment he is surrounded), my theory has always been that any lead worth covering is worth covering well.

Despite the thousands of tips received as to the location of gangsters, and despite the utter lack of faith in what the results of some of these leads might be, always believed we should enter on each raid as if we were going after the most desperate and known in our history.

Frequently when proceeding on an assignment with other Special Agents to the scene of a raid planned after we had received our information from one of the present members of the gang.

Melvin Purvis

On the day of the raid, I was in the office of the Special Agent in Charge, to discuss the matter with him. He was very interested in the matter, and I told him that I was going to turn out to be "the" man.

In my early days in Chicago I did this, and in some instances today and in the future the same will be done. I believe in generally speaking, I believe in the use of force, and I believe in the use of force.

When Gray fell with a bullet through his back, he was a "hot" example of the "hot" man.

Gray, as he had done there in the back yard, was a "hot" man.

Special Agent, entering the room, was a "hot" man.

Barker Silent

We did question Don Barker, who kept his hidden away, unknown to the public, or to the press, for several days, but we got nothing out of him. When I talked to Barker in my office in Chicago, he was silent. He just looked at me and looked straight ahead.

He was silent about that raid. If we had used trigger at that time, we might have taken him alive and had a chance to question him.

Suzanne Couldn't Afford It

THE DREAM OF EVERY SPORT AMATEUR, whether in the various sports like the prize ring or the socially superior divers, say, like golf and tennis, is to get paid in proportion to his or her own estimate of worth. Though, at the risk of over-argument the leg, I remember hearing C. C. Pyle, who was the original Mephistopheles of sport and was at one time seducing F. J. Grange, Roll Aiken and various vocational amateurs, say how Suzanne Lenka once refused a cash guarantee of $15,000.

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT
THE PERFECT GUM
THE FLAVOR LASTS

The Seamen's Union on Solid Ground

THE DETERMINATION of the International Seamen's Union that the contract to which it is committed be respected stands out as a symbol of the future integrity of American labor.

Officials of the union contend that a great majority of the seamen are at heart in accord with the principle that a contract is as binding upon the worker as upon the employer.

They charge that methods of intimidation have been used by an organized minority to keep honest workers from carrying out the contractual obligations they recognize and accept.

It is to be hoped this contention is true. If it is true, the will of the majority should quickly prevail.

The bargaining rights which labor seeks would be worthless, if agreements negotiated under them lacked the substance of good faith.

Labor would certainly not extend to the employer the right to break a contract. It cannot, with any claim to merit, countenance repudiation of the obligations the workers assume.

THE present position of the International Seamen's Union is unquestionably sound. It has accepted an agreement with shipowners extending until December 31, 1937, and the clear interest of labor rests in the carrying out of that contract.

Organized labor in the United States has a commendable record for the faithful performance of contracts, a fact in no small measure responsible for the substantial contributions labor has made to the national welfare.

A Generous Speed Limit

REGISTRAR GOODWIN'S 40-miles-an-hour speed limit on wet roads is far from drastic. If anything, it is lenient. And motorists who value their own lives and other lives will be inclined to drive even more slowly.

A person traveling forty miles an hour on a slippery highway is taking chances if he applies his brakes suddenly. There is no knowing what the car will do.

The fact that the Registrar, willing to use common sense in the administration of his office, sets a generous speed limit ought not to be an invitation to every motorist to try to reach it.

This is the harvest season for Death on the highway. Nights are long and streets are wet much of the time.

Caution behind the wheel is more than wisdom. It is a duty.

A Real Miracle Man

GEORGE HOLDEN TINKHAM'S re-election as Congressman in the Democratic Third Congressional District was one of the interesting events of the recent landslide election.

Congressman Tinkham is a Republican, an outspoken citizen and a vigorous anti-New Dealer. He has held office for twenty-two years, though he has not found it necessary to do much campaigning since 1920.

Yet this year, despite his extensive tour of Europe in the midst of the campaign, he was swept into office, receiving more votes in his district than did President Roosevelt, Governor-Elect Hurley or Governor Curley.

If ever there is a statue erected and called "The Miracle Man of Politics," the face should wear a beard and the inscription should say: TINKHAM.

Farewell to the Cardinal

EUGENIO CARDINAL PACELLI, Papal Secretary of State and first of his high office to visit America, left New York Saturday for Italy. His stay was all too brief.

Of America, which he spanned on his good-will flight across the continent, he saw more than many of its citizens take the time to view in a lifetime.

It is no wonder he was enthusiastic over the "marvelous beauty" of the sight from the air.

Cardinal Pacelli departs with the good will of every American and the general hope that some day he will visit us again.

Youth on Crime Roll

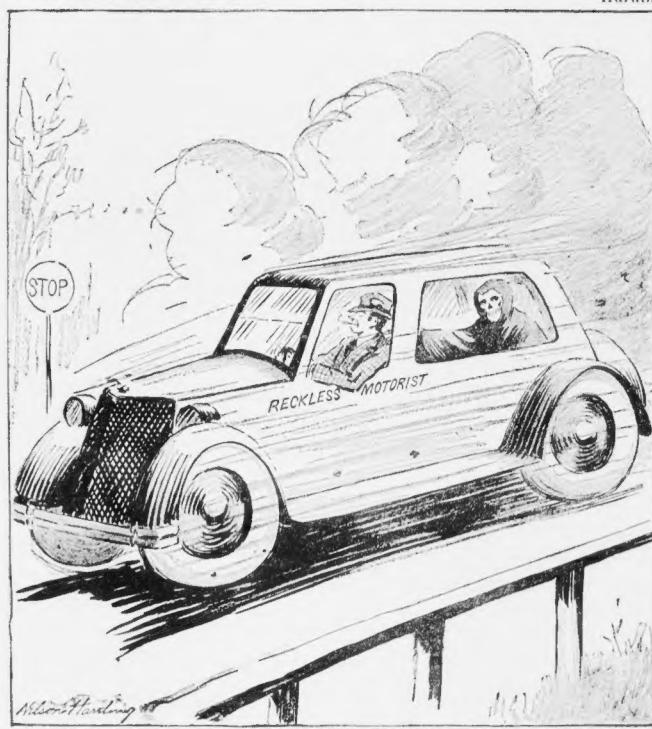

SEVENTEEN out of every one hundred persons arrested during the first nine months of this year were under 21 years of age.

This is revealed by J. Edgar Hoover, whose Federal Bureau of Investigation has completed examination of 343,132 arrest records.

The alarming increase in crime among youth is a national disgrace.

It is a challenge to parents, churches, schools and every individual who holds public office.

His Backseat Driver

A grim passenger is riding
In the cars of reckless drivers,
All unseen, but ever present
Is this terrible companion.

Seated there by invitation
Of the heedless and the headstrong
Speeding onward to disaster
With their deadly backseat driver.
